

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for detecting a protein having a disulfide bond or an allergen protein, comprising: protecting by chemically modifying a free SH group of a protein in a sample to be tested; cleaving a disulfide bond of the free SH group-protected protein to expose SH groups; and detecting the exposed SH groups.